SELPA Series on Universal Design for Learning

This year-long professional development event will include one full-day training followed by three half-day trainings across the year. The event will introduce and unpack the Universal Design for Learning framework, including the UDL lesson planning process. Intensive half-day sessions will include a deeper investigation into specific areas related to UDL, including academic access for ELA and math, determining which research and evidence-based practices to use, and social skill instruction for all students. The final half-day training will wrap up the series and allow for discussion, reflection, and guided planning for future growth and development.
